

Leadership Development Program
Lloyd P. Young Student Center

Keene State College

229 Main Street, Keene, New Hampshire 03435-3003
603-358-2664 Fax 603-358-2875
www.keene.edu/young

To whom it may concern:

Keene State College was fortunate to bring in Miles Washburn to present his "Breaking Bad Habits and Bad Traditions" to our fraternity and sorority community. Miles worked closely with us as the event was approaching, making sure he was well versed in the history and current situations facing our community. He took that information, and really tailored his message to our students, which really helped them engage and connect with his message and program. He was truly invested in making sure that his visit and message was received by the students, and that they were able to connect the big ideas with what they might be facing in their organizations and on campus. Miles' intention isn't just to have students hear him, he wants them to understand.

Miles does an excellent job connecting with students, and he is committed to their success. He is able to keep things fun, yet drives home the serious message of his programs. Miles challenges students to understand and live their values, and then provides them the tools to do just that in his programs. His passion for his work and the fraternal movement shines through in his programs and his regular conversations with participants. He also comes with a level of credibility through his years of continued involvement and service to his fraternity. It showcases to students that this isn't just something you do for four years, it is a lifetime commitment.

Miles has been a great individual to work with, and is a real partner in programming. His attention to detail and professionalism, combined with his easy going nature and ability to connect with students is a great formula for a successful program. I would definitely recommend Miles for your future programming needs. If I can help answer any questions, please let me know.

Best Regards,

Alex Brown

Coordinator of Greek Life and Student Leadership